Global Literature in Libraries Initiative (GLLI)

We are a group of translators, librarians, teachers, editors and others dedicated to helping librarians identify and raise the visibility of world literature for children, teens, and adults.

Our activities include:
- Creating pan-publisher catalogs
- Coordinating a database of translations
- Sharing ideas for selecting, evaluating, using, and promoting world literature for all ages
- Answering questions on our Facebook page
- Administering the GLLI Translated YA Book Prize

The GLLI Translated YA Book Prize is the first award to recognize publishers, translators, and authors of books in English translation for young adult readers. The award honors the most outstanding translated work that was originally written and published (or simultaneously published) in a language other than English. For at least the first year of this prize, works published within three years of the submission deadline were considered. The 2019 ten-title shortlist includes a winner and three honor books.

The 2019 GLLI Translated YA Book Prize Committee: Annette Y. Goldsmith, Gene Hayworth, Kim Rostan, Laura Simeon, and Elaine Tai, with the help of GLLI manager Rachel Hildebrandt Reynolds.
